

THE HOMEBREWERY

elcome, traveler. Sit and tell us of what you have seen – the unheard of monsters, which slither and bite. Tell us of the wondrous items and artifacts you have found, their mysteries yet to be unlocked –

HOMEBREW D&D MADE EASY

THE HOMEBREWERY makes the creation and sharing of authentic-looking D&D (3.5E, 4E and 5E) homebrews easy. It uses Markdown and a little CSS magic to make your brews come to life.

Try it! Simply edit the text on the left and watch it update live on the right.

Of course, a document isn't of much help if it can't be printed out. Luckily, exporting PDFs with THE HOMEBREWERY is very straightforward:

- Mac: ⌘-Shift-E.
- Windows: Ctrl-Shift-E.

Have an idea of how to make THE HOMEBREWERY better? Or did you find something that wasn't quite right? Head here and let me know!

LICENSING

THE HOMEBREWERY is licensed using the MIT License, which means you are free to use THE HOMEBREWERY in any way that you want, except for claiming that you made it yourself.

MARKDOWN

Markdown is a lightweight markup language that is used to generate the HTML styled by THE HOMEBREWERY. If Markdown proves insufficient for your needs, you can use a limited subset of HTML to augment your Markdown.

- Headers: Headers are denoted with pound signs, the more signs, the smaller the header. Follow the last pound with a space and the text of your header.
- Emphasis: Emphasis is shown with asterisks on either side of a word or phrase – single asterisks for italic, double asterisks for bold.
- Small caps - use backticks to render SMALL CAPS.
- Links: Links are created with square brackets (around the text of the link) followed directly with parentheses and the url inside.
- Lists: Undordered lists are made with dashes and can be nested arbitrarily with two spaces. Ordered lists use a number instead of a dash.
- Images: Images use the same format as links, but are prefixed with an exclamation point (!). Currently images must be hosted on a third-party site (imgur, etc.) or provided with an absolute filepath.
- Column and page breaks are left to the author. To start a new page, use a backslash followed by the word page. Use a backslash followed by the word col to break to the next column.
- Fences are block elements. Indicate sidebars, notes and tables with triple backticks, followed by the name of the block element. Close the block with three more backticks.
